

ABORTION AND THE LATINO COMMUNITY

Abortion's Impact

While abortion has touched all levels of American society, perhaps no group has been devastated by abortion as much as minorities. Latinas represented 13% of the U.S. population of women of child bearing age in 2000 but accounted for 20% of all abortions performed that year in America.

The abortion rate among Latinos is almost 3 times higher than the abortion rate among Caucasians (33 per 1000 women, compared to 13 per 1000). And one in every four Latino pregnancies ends in abortion, compared to about one in every six Caucasian pregnancies. The loss to the community is more than just numbers or population. Abortion means the loss of Latino athletes, artists, political leaders, scientists, teachers, engineers, businessmen, and businesswomen.

Post Abortion Syndrome

Abortion can have many negative effects on a woman's life and health. There is growing evidence from research studies that an abortion can set off a complex reaction, including physical and psychological aftereffects, which can have a powerful, negative impact on a woman's entire life. More than 100 physical and psychological complications have been associated with abortion including infection, abdominal pain, damages to internal organs, depression, increased drug and alcohol abuse, the inability to have more children, and increased rates of breast cancer.
